When Your Toddler Gets the Winter Sniffles

Here in South Africa, winter brings crisp mornings, crunchy autumn leaves and dark mornings! It is also the time of the year that many of our little tots pick up coughs and colds. Being a working parent and having a sick child presents all sorts of challenges. If your child is in day care, try to do the right thing and keep your little one at home until he is better. This will help prevent the spread of infection within the school, and will keep pupils and staff healthy.

Healthy Sensory Habits for 21st Century Parents

Another event coming up which I am really excited about is a workshop entitled "Healthy Sensory habits for 21st Century Parents". This is a dynamite filled half day workshop for parents presented by Annemarie Lombard, Occupational Therapist and founder of Sensory Intelligence® Consulting. Learn about sensory overload and stress in the world today, and use time, technology and activities to ensure optimal development for our children. The workshops will be held in June and July. Visit www.sensoryintelligence.co.za for more information.
